Man Fell into an Art Installation called The Descent Into Limbo

At a museum in Porto, Portugal, an Italian man in his 60s fell into Artist Anish Kapoor's art installation, coincidentally titled Descent Into Limbo. This installation features a 6ft deep hole in the ground, made to look like a simple spot on the floor. To be fair, there were several warning signs around, as well as a guard standing close to the hole.

CHINESE GHOST MONTH

by Tim Foulds

While most Western countries limit their celebration of all things deathly to a single day (Halloween), China certainly doesn't hold back. The 15th day of the 7th lunar month marks the start of a whole month of dedications to the dead with Zhongyuan Festival, or Ghost Festival. The lucky souls. Also known as 'Half July', it is said that during this month, the gates of the underworld are opened, and the spirits of the dead are unleashed to roam the earth.

According to Buddhist and Taoist beliefs, after dying, the spirit is divided into two parts: one rests in the grave and the other remains in the ancestral tablet. Frequent offerings, sacrifices and rituals are required, to keep the spirit happy. Nevertheless, trouble arises if a family neglects their deceased relatives or if the souls have some form of 'unfinished' business left on earth. The problem becomes magnified when the gates of the underworld are unlocked in 'Half July', and these so-called 'hungry' souls are free to wander the earth to gratify their desires.

During this ghostly month, people therefore aim to satisfy the unhappy souls by providing them with gifts. Traditionally, food and paper money are burnt as offerings, but the idea of 'updating' the lifestyle of the dead is now commonplace, with the burning of paper replicas representing fashionable items and products from contemporary society, such as paper iPhones, beers, cigarettes and laptops. Aside from ensuring the happiness of the dead souls, here are a few things you should know about Ghost Month in China.

- Whistling attracts unwanted ghostly attention.
- Patting someone on the shoulder is risky business
- Leaving clothes out to dry tempts ghosts to steal them.
- Staying up late risks being possessed by some spirit.
- Marriage or the start of a relationship during this month is destined for an unhappy end.
- If you buy a house or apartment, it will inevitably end up haunted.
- Children, senior citizens, weak or sensitive individuals should avoid going out at night at the risk of being attacked by evil souls.

So, carry out offerings to your dead relatives, keep your wits about you and enjoy the ghostly festivities folks!

ALL THINGS BRIGHT & BEAUTIFUL

by Tim Foulds

With Halloween on the horizon, Tim Foulds compares supernatural creatures from China and the Western World.

For several Western countries, the month of October entails the festival of Halloween and the 'Day of the Dead.' However, no other continent seems to possess a culture as rich in ghosts, ghouls, and the supernatural as Asia. Chinese culture, for instance, thrives deeply in superstition, a practice which still plays a leading role in how various people lead their lives. With ghost tales passed down from generation to generation, the supernatural is rooted within tradition. As such, with more than 1,500 different mystical creatures in Chinese folklore, people are more open to supernatural happenings than in the Western world.

In Europe and the West, the rising practice of rational thinking, which demands evidence for any paranormal occurrence, has led to a decline in magic and mysticism. Nevertheless, that isn't to say that all traces of the supernatural have disappeared totally from modern society. Let's examine a few of the most popular supernatural beings from the West and China.

THE WEST

Witches: Although many poor women were brutally hunted as witches throughout medieval Europe for their meddling magical powers, the modern image of witchcraft has somewhat changed (long pointed hats, cats, cloaks, and the ability to fly on a broomstick). Moreover, Hermione Granger has worked wonders for witches' universal perception.

Zombies: Walking Dead, Shaun of the Dead, World War Z. These delightful beings have been the source of inspiration for numerous popular blockbusters. As the reincarnation of decomposing corpses, you certainly wouldn't want to bump into one on a dark night.

Ghosts: Also known as poltergeists, phantoms, and spectres, ghosts are the spirits of deceased humans. With varying descriptions, they can be invisible, appear translucent, unrecognizable wispy shapes, or even take the form of realistic visions. How spooky!

CHINA

Vampires: Our favorite blood-drinking, black-cape-wearing, pale-skinned, fanged friends, arise from their coffins to suck the life out of their victims. Tasty.

Grim Reaper: A popular costume for Halloween (a skeletal form, black cape and a terrific scythe), the Grim Reaper spends his days dragging his victims into death. A nice guy, really.

Diao Si Gui (Red Tongue Ghosts): These ugly spirits represent the souls who were hanged, committed suicide, or were sentenced to death. They were commonly depicted with their long red tongues lolling from their mouths.

Ox-Head & Horse-Face: These two guardians of the underworld have the bodies of men with the heads of either an ox or horse. Like the Grim Reaper, they welcome the dying into death.

Jiu Wei Hu (Nine-Tailed Fox): A magical, yet mischievous fox spirit that prefers to spend its time shape shifting into the form of beautiful, young women in order to entice and seduce men. The sly devil.

Jiangshi: A cross between a Western vampire and a zombie, these creatures rise from the souls of troublemakers to steal the 'qi' or energy of human beings. With rigid bodies and stiff, outstretched arms, they come out at night with their guise of red eyes, sharp claws, and greenish skin. You can't miss them. Believe me.

E Gui / Hungry Ghosts: These are the spirits of both greedy individuals and those with unfinished business in the living world. Green or grey in color, they frequent streets or kitchens. Some can spit flames, others are skeletal, but they generally have huge stomachs, a small neck, and mouth. An attractive look.

HAUNTED QINGDAO

by Christina Lee

Boys and girls of every age, wouldn't you like to see something strange? Come with us, and you will see this, our town of Halloween!

With Halloween just around the corner, it's time to share some horror stories with you!

Here we go! The TOP- 3 the most haunted places in Qingdao:

1: The Seaman's Club or German Navy Club (1903 德国俱乐部)

The club is located on HuBei Road in old Qingdao and is on our top-3 of the most haunted places in Qingdao. It was designed in 1899 and completed in 1902.

According to history, that Neo-Renaissance German style building was the first to have a large enough auditorium to house grand events for local German occupants. It was later used as the Japanese club during the Japanese Occupation after The Second World War, until, U.S. Troops were stationed in Qingdao. At present, the building is used as a restaurant, brewery and the cinema museum.

The locals say that the club was built on unmarked graves where, for over a century, lots of poor people had been buried underneath Hubei street - out of sight and long forgotten.

During the Japanese occupation, the building was empty for a while; the club was then bought by a local merchant, who entrusted the place to a sick old man. He always looked after everything in the club as a gatekeeper. The man suffered from a dreaded skin disease and so he died several years after. The club was returned to the local city administration and was rebuilt as a hotel. From that time, strange things started happening there: some guests were said to have heard screaming in the hallways and had seen a ghost of an old man in the hotel. His face was uglified. Every time anybody tried to come closer to him, the ghost disappeared...

2: Huashi Lou (花石楼)

It is a large rocky outcropping on which a stone Russian villa was constructed. Built in 1932, the mansion combines Greek, Gothic, and Romance influences throughout its five-story hulk. It is constructed from marble and stone, and features a large turret and a multicolored outer face which inspired the locals' nickname for the structure, "the colorful rock building". It also contains a passageway which Chiang Kai-shek used, to go from the building to the seashore.

As we know, China's Kali-shek stayed in Huashilou, but only for one night. And, trust me, there was a mystical reason for that. He couldn't sleep normally because of strange sounds from the basement...even though there wasn't anyone there at night, he could hear the music from there and a girl's voice who was reciting poems.

And the situation hasn't changed. The workers were worried about the sounds coming from the mystical basement and so decided to close the door and hang up a 'NO ENTRY' sign.

3: Qingdao Art Gallery and Museum (青岛美术馆)

The museum is located near the old campus of Ocean University, on one of the oldest streets in downtown, University road. It was a former building for the Red Swastika Society (世界红卍字会) until the end of 1940s. The society is a voluntary association founded in China in the 1920s by Qian Nengxun, Du Bingyin and Li Jiabai.

Its mission was a broad-based effort of philanthropy and moral education.

After the Red Swastika Society left the building, the place was used as an execution ground for soldiers. Several hundreds of people were killed there, without the opportunity for funerals and to find rest in peace.

Nowadays, some workers who stay there after midnight have reported seeing apparitions appear in the doorway, even feeling an invisible presence preventing them from going upstairs. After the place was opened for tourists, most people who go there talk about deeply depressing atmosphere there...

YESTERDAYS' LEGENDS

by Chloe Neville

▼ Strigoi: Romania

Similar to the vampire, strigoi are the ghosts of people who lived or died in unhappy circumstances: suicides, the illegitimate, the unbaptized or the unmarried. With red hair and bluish-purple eyes, strigoi live on human blood. Burying a body with a bottle of whiskey is said to prevent a loved one from returning as a strigoi.

▲ La pisadeira: Brazil

A tall, skinny woman with long yellow fingernails and red eyes sits on rooftops, and watches families inside their homes eating dinner. After the meal, when someone goes to sleep on a full stomach, La pisadeira sneaks into their bedroom. She sits on their chest so they cannot move and she watches them as they begin to panic, the victim's eyes partly open, but they're not fully asleep or fully awake.

With this being the month of ghostly horrors and gory stories, we have selected a few favourite tales from different countries to get you in the spooky spirit. You may not want to be alone when reading some of these!

◀ Skondhokatas: Bengal, India

The headless ghosts of people who were decapitated in train accidents, skondhokatas haunt places where they died. Passengers report seeing them in train stations at night, or from the windows of trains traveling in the dark. They're said to be violent, but easy to outwit.

▲ The Bell Witch: Tennessee, US

In the early 1800's, John Bell moved his family to Tennessee's Red River Settlement. A few years later, Bell encountered a strange animal sitting in the middle of his corn field. The animal had the body of a dog and the head of the rabbit, and when Bell attempted to kill the creepy creature, it ran away. The family soon after began hearing mysterious knockings, rattling chains, faint whisperings, and even dogfights in the dead of the night. After years of torment, John Bell was mysteriously poisoned, and the spirits visits become far less frequent.

► Jiang Shi: China

Sometimes called “Chinese hopping vampires”, these creatures blur the line between ghost and zombie. They are the spirits of people who died by suicide or violence; Jiang Shi have greenish skin, they wear the robes of the Qing Dynasty and move by hopping or bouncing. They feed off the qi (life essence) of living humans.

▲ Toyols: Malaysia and Indonesia

Tiny green-skinned goblins with glowing red eyes, toyols are dead fetuses or stillborn babies reanimated by black magic. Masters are said to keep their toyols in jars, feeding them milk, candy and, on special occasions, drops of blood drawn from the toe of the lady of the house.

▲ Kuchisake-onna: Japan

This creepy Japanese ghost is a beautiful woman in a surgical mask, which is commonly worn by cold or allergy sufferers in many parts of Asia. She approaches victims at remote train or bus stations at night and asks, “Am I beautiful?” If the victim says ‘yes’, she removes the mask, revealing a gaping, joker-like bloody smile. If the victim says ‘no’, she pulls out a butcher’s knife and slices the victims face like her own.

◀ Gjenganger: Scandinavia

These Nordic spirits kill via punches, usually delivered at night. The punched skin will turn blue and cause a wasting disease, which will eventually travel to the victim’s heart. Unlike most ghosts, gjenganger look like normal living people, which makes them more difficult to spot.

▲ La Llorona: Mexico

La Llorona, ‘the weeping woman’ was said to be a villager named Maria who drowned her own children in a river in order to be with the man she loved. When he rejected her, she drowned herself. Now she haunts the river banks, dressed in white and weeping for her children. Sometimes, she’ll try to kidnap living children as replacements.

▲ Popobawa: Pemba, Tanzania

An evil creature stalks its inhabitants by shape-shifting (such as a bat or human-like form). It prefers to come out at night, but some say they have seen it during the day. The popobawa is indiscriminate in its targets but, in a common retelling, the spirit sexually assaults men.

CONFESSIONS OF A SHOPAHOLIC

by Maddy Steele

As a self-proclaimed shopping addict, I would consider myself as a professional in this activity. Why come all the way to China and shop a new city to death without sharing my secrets of the best locations around town? Listen up people, I'm about to tell you where all the best shopping spots are in Qingdao.

MARKETS

Admittedly markets can be quite hit and miss, however, when you find that piece, the rummaging and fighting off eager sales persons is all worth it- "looky looky, come in my friend" repeats like a stuck record.

THE FAKE MARKET: 'OLD TOWN'

📍 45 Liaocheng Lu 聊城路 45 号

- Accessories
- Hagglng

This is the Queen of shopping destinations in Qingdao, you can't leave this city without visiting and hagglng for something at the fake market. Fact.

I have put Old Town in inverted brackets because this is where everyone says that this place is located when really, it's on the outskirts. The market is about a 15-minute walk from the Old Town's Cathedral. Follow the address above, because, despite being popular, it's quite a hidden location. The building area is designed with traditional red and gold turrets, sculptures of dragons and ancient patterning scaling the walls. With four floors there is nothing that you can't find. You can pick up anything from a pair of socks to a fake Gucci suitcase or a plastic fan to a Chanel dupe watch. Many people don't seem to know that the fake market has four floors, so find the stairs and explore, there are lots of hidden corridors.

The best of the goods is on the second floor. This is heaven for a person obsessed with the big brands who is reluctant to make a burning genuine-Gucci-bag-sized-hole in their bank balance. You can also find dupes of your all-time classics; Nike Air Force, Nike Air Max, Adidas Stan Smiths, plus, (almost identical) versions of all the newer models. The stalls sell dupes of all the designer giants new releases. They are practically identical to the real thing at only a fraction of the price. But, don't forget to haggle. They'll start off their bidding high, you give your first price (lower than you're actually willing to spend), they will either say no, or haggle with you and offer a price slightly lower than what they originally said. Keep haggling until you can settle on a price you're willing to pay and that they're willing to compromise on. Be reasonable, but keep pushing, remember: they want sales. I managed to get a bag down from 550 Yuan to 220 Yuan! It was a dupe of the Yves Saint Laurent Monochrome Kate croc-effect leather shoulder bag (~£1300). I'm in love.

Make sure that if there are particular bags or purses you are after, that you save photos of the design to make sure it's not blindingly obvious that it's a fake. Whilst there, I saw some terrible spelling mistakes and mismatching of logos so they were obviously not genuine 'Kelvin Claine'. And if you do manage to bag yourself a bargain, remember: if you wear it like its real, people will think that its real.

NIGHT MARKET

- Weihai Lu, Taidong 台东商业步行街
- Clothes, shoes, accessories (and food!)
- Haggling

Shopping and food. Name a better duo. The night market provides this perfect combination. These stalls are perfect, if you're looking for dupe designer pieces as well as your high street sports brands: Adidas, Nike, Champion. You can pick up all your staple basics too, meaning this location is perfect for a traveller that's forgotten to pack all the essentials. Grab super cheap replacements for all the socks, knickers, hair bands and belts that you left behind. And if you're looking to spruce up your look then you're in luck as there are designer dupes galore! The market covers a huge outdoor open space and weaves in between the shops between Weihai Road, Hai'er Road and Daming Road.

If you get hungry mid-shop (let's face it, who doesn't?) then food is literally one stall away. The wonderful range of cuisines varies from Qingdao's famous sea food, German sausage, barbecued street food to stir fry and bubbling drinks that smoke! This market is a place to allow yourself to get fully lost. Immerse yourself in the stalls, allow yourself to be carried along with the bustling crowd and give haggling a go, but don't be as pushy since there are price tags on show.

CHINESE CLOTHING CHAINS TO LOOK OUT FOR

If you're not one for haggling and just want to buy branded clothes with the pleasure of returnability, then actual shops are the places for you.

URBAN REVIVO

- Clothes, shoes, jewellery, accessories
- No haggling!

You can find this store in Mix C shopping centre. The brand encompasses clean lines, elegance and class with a twist of urban revolution. Mix up your denim with contrast stitching, your bag collection with a yellow half-moon plastic carrier or your idea of summer with floaty dungarees. Asymmetry runs through this store with the frilled skirts whilst smock tops provide the perfect breezy cover-up for Qingdao's heat. This store is up to date with all of the newest trends but gives each item a unique twist that makes you unable to walk away.

WESTLINK

- Clothes, shoes, jewellery, accessories
- No haggling!

This one stop shopping location is perfect for last minute gathering of a whole outfit. One side of the store is dedicated to shoes, the middle to underwear and the other to clothes meaning this is the place to go if you need dressing from head to toe. The shoe collection reminds me of my dreams for a future shoe wardrobe: the centre table holds heels for all occasions whilst the walls are lined with trainer dupes of the classics: Adidas, Puma, and Saint Laurent. There are sandals for any shopper, think bows, buckles and Burberry. This is also the place to find bags galore. Whether it's a mini messenger, a shoulder bag or a twist on this seasons favourite: the fanny pack. This shop is for you.

The clothing vibe screams modern classic with a SS18 chic. Try their puff-sleeved button down military dress for this seasons Victoriana trend or gingham culottes and floaty dungarees for money-smart spending to give you that trans-seasonal wardrobe to take you into Autumn. Dress for the weather in their crochet trim mini dress or asymmetrical ruffled skirts. This shopping location is affordable, on trend and despite its size it hosts clothes for any occasion.

BAI WU XI

- Clothes, shoes, jewellery, accessories
- No haggling!

This store's class and elegance has price tags to match. As an up-market shopping destination, you can expect nothing but quality, detailing of a perfectionist and unique designs. Come here to find macramé totes, transparent bucket bags and snake-skin textured clutches.

You'll find a skinny-belt rail: studded, suede and embellished. There's one for any outfit. Add some classy chic to the button-down popper jogger trend with their wooden button linen trousers or pair 90's street style joggers with canvas and a draw string waist with their striped bottoms. For a twist on the classic staples you can find up-turned straight leg jeans or a green striped two-piece co-ord with leather straps. If you need inspiration then the stores layout does that for you: they place hats and bags over carefully paired clothing so your potential outfits are prepared for you. This store designates a whole centrepiece table to jewellery, satin scarfs, and phone accessories. Each piece is unique and paired with their selection of skin care products: face masks, moisturisers and bars of soap, this spot is perfect for finding gifts.

THE BEST OF QINGDAO'S BOUTIQUES

Boutiques are perfect for finding unique pieces. However, sometimes a heavy price tag comes hand in hand with this independent store originality.

PINK ELEPHANT

↖ Nanjing Lu

- Clothes, shoes, bags, accessories
- No haggling!
- 100-200RMB (with some individual items far out of this price range also)

Pink Elephant is a beautiful independent boutique, perfect for finding one-off pieces at a reasonable price. The store is only small, with an island in the middle with various shoes and baseball caps. Attempts to dupe Balenciaga, Supreme and other designer giants are littered around the store. I say 'attempts' because many of these are miss-spelt. Aside from these copies, the store holds unique pieces, much of which are floaty summer tea dresses, vintage mom shorts and jeans, and sport-lux joggers. This thrift-shop style vibe speaks to a young, bold audience. If you're looking for some statement bags, then this is the place to go. Their bag collection is gorgeous. Many of the bags are boxy hand bags such as the olive green faux-snake-skin one I found whereas you can also find dupes of high end designers. One, a nude moon shaped hand bag with a ring hoop detail handle, was a Chloe dupe (1,200 RMB) and significantly higher than the other items in the shop in price but stunning none the less.

SEVEN SPACE

↖ Nanjing Lu

- Clothes, shoes, bags, accessories
- No haggling!
- 100-200RMB (with some individual items far out of this price range also)

Seven Space can be found just next door to Pink Elephant. The shop window reminds me of Urban Outfitters with its tripod style shelves and succulent plants whilst the monochrome maths book checked walls scream American Apparel. Baseball caps embroidered with small images hang from bars that line the walls including little sassy clicking fingers with love hearts. Wrap tops with puffy sleeves or long ties are hung alongside summer tops and floral dresses. A large collection of unique 90's style cropped silk joggers line one wall along with picnic baskets filled with plants and numerous boxy messenger hand bags.

Seven Space have a huge collection of graphic statement tee's that complement the tropical-summer-style posters: pineapples and flamingos. This store shouts bold, fun and brave. My favourite piece that shone (literally) was the silver diamante draw string bag: beautiful.

SIX MARKETS IN QINGDAO

by Lucy Ter-Minassian

IMART 生活家

Imart is a local farmer's market located in the Shinan District, opening their doors for you every day of the week from 8:00am to 7:30pm. It's completely indoors, so there's no need to worry about getting soaked in the rain. At the market, you can buy everything you need to prepare a proper meal, since this place is packed with tons of different fresh fruits, vegetables, seafood and chilled meat. Furthermore, you can get warm dishes like fried fish or fresh bread during lunch. If you don't get everything you need from the vendors, the market also includes a small supermarket, stocked with mainly Chinese products.

Address: 20 Xiaoyao Er Lu 逍遥二路 20 号

FLEA MARKET

Just a short walking distance of the culture market, you can find a lovely little flea market. The vendors are very friendly and forthcoming. You can definitely practice your bargaining skills here. Come here if you just moved to a new apartment and still need furniture or kitchen utensils. You can even equip yourself with some airconditioning for some hot summer nights (in case you haven't done that already).

Address: 14 Dangang Yi Lu 大港一路 14 号

LICUN MARKET 李村大集

By far the biggest market is Licun Market. It's located a little bit further from the city center, but you can easily take a bus to get there. The choice of products is quite diverse. Besides the usual fruits and vegetables, you have the chance to purchase flowers or various plants, electric household appliances, toys, bags, living animals like chicken, turtles or small scorpions. It's unbelievable how many different types of fish you can purchase as well. There's half a hall filled with aquariums with a wide variety of fish. This is the perfect place to stock up on pets for your own little private zoo.

Address: Chongqing Zhong Lu
重庆中路

XIN DA ZHONG TUANDAO MARKET 馨大众团岛农贸市场

4

This market can be found in the old town and also provides protection against stormy weather. The place is well structured, with two different levels that are connected to each other, as well as an entrance hall and a chilled room for the purchase of meat. Also little arrows on the ground show you the right direction, so you'll never get lost. Just like the previous market, you can buy fresh fruits, seafood (which is mostly still alive) on the ground floor, as well as vegetables on the first floor. Additionally, the shops sell spices, tea, a few clothes, prepared vegetables and some baked goods.

Address: Tuandao 4 Lu 团岛四路

CULTURE MARKET 青岛文化街

This market is a gem if you're looking for something more unique. You can get amazing gifts for your loved ones here. At this culture market, the vendors mainly sell chinese jewellery, sculptures, some mahogany furniture and decorations as well as marvelous paintings.

Address: Taidong 台东商圈

MORNING MARKET

Of course, we also found a market for those of you who would consider themselves to be early birds. Start your day with a relaxing stroll over the morning market in Shibei District. Like every other market, it might get a little crowded, but that only adds to the lively atmosphere.

The Market is divided into an outside area and two different halls, that are distinguishable in their size. In the bigger hall, you can switch between different floors, that are connected by stairs. In these halls, you'll find the usual things like fruits, vegetables, eggs, seafood, meat, spices and some fresh baked goods. Outside, you'll get tons of fresh vegetables and fruits as well, just that they're mainly sold directly from the back of a pickup truck. In the second hall, you will find more miscellany like clocks, some wooden chairs, clothes, ornamental fish and a few turtles.

THE ADVENTURES OF DALE AND CREAM

Why are you naked?

I'm always naked.

I mean really naked... no fur.

Oh. Now that is odd. Did you shave me in your sleep?

No. Although I have considered it...

Hey wait. Where is your beard?

Now I won't get the over 65 manager's special.

It couldn't last forever...

REDSTAR'S PUB CRAWL REVIEW

by Chloe Neville

To round off our infamous 2018 Pub Crawl, REDSTAR presents the splendid bars that have participated in this year's memorable marathon of drink and play.

Venu+

📍 21F Intercontinental,
98 Aomen Lu
☎ 8579-9898

With stunning rooftop views of the downtown skyline and May Fourth Square, Venu+ has a classy vibe. Mostly known for their crazy sunset events, foam parties and incredible buffets, Venu+ is also decked out with comfy sofas for those low-key evenings.

GLOBE

📍 Tianbao Guoji, 61 Haier Lu
☎ 185 6250-6682

With a games area in its entrance, including a football table and darts, GLOBE has its main attraction further into the building; its bar. Next to the bar is a dance floor which is big enough for a boogie. They also have a huge drinks menu, so there is plenty of choice for your evening tittle!

LENBACH Restaurant & Bar

📍 LG F 173, The MixC,
6 Shandong Lu
☎ 5557-5718

Founded in 2006, Lenbach has been famous for providing authentic German food and beer, serving western cuisine and drinks at a reasonable price. After more than ten years, Lenbach has become a well-known brand in China, and has opened restaurants in Chengdu, Xi'an, Qingdao, Hangzhou and other cities. In the near future, more branches will open, as Lenbach are dedicated to become the best brand of German beer house in China.

Boky's

📍 162 Jianxi Lu
☎ 8587-3898

As you walk through the cowboy style swing doors into Boky's, your impression is probably already set. However, despite the standard sports bar checklist of speakers, a bar, darts and football table, Boky's is still a breath of fresh air. Focused around its friendly service, Boky's provides tasty American food, great music, and a clean, home-style environment. In the evening, Boky's becomes full of life, with their loud music, the place becomes more focused on dancing than drinking, especially when they bring out the laser lights!

The Fox

📍 20-8 Yanerdao Zhi Lu
☎ 156 8999-7890

New to the Qingdao beer scene having opened in June, The Fox provides an eclectic mix of sports bar energy and old school rock and roll. With a darts board, a huge TV and vintage rock and roll posters, this is the location for a fun night out with friends. Their brewed-in-house beers include the 'Bob Marley', 'Wicked Wheat', 'Silk Stout' and 'Red Fox IPA'. I recommend the Silk Stout, the refreshing taste of coffee with a hint of chocolate, or their Red Fox IPA which is just what you'd expect from an IPA; light, crisp and served ice cold.

Lu B

📍 50 Zhangzhou Yi Lu
☎ 8895-0797

The warm string lights of Lu B Restaurant enchantingly entice passersby's, who are initially drawn to the pleasant acoustic sounds, followed by a desire to eat and drink while listening to live music which is played every night, from 7.30pm-10.30pm. So, you can enjoy sweet sounds along with craft beer from the tap or from their finest selection of globally imported beers. After being open for over half a year, Lu B acts as both a café and bar, specialising in fusion foods.

Always Beer Garden

📍 88 Aomen Lu
☎ 6606-1828

Hankering after some Belgian beer? You're in luck. Always Beer Garden hosts a proud collection of ice-cold Belgian beers: get an ice-cold bottle from the fridge, or an enormous, Oktoberfest-style litre of draft. Always is perfect for a relaxed evening meal; sinking into their soft chairs, around one of the warm, wooden tables is like being in the cosy interior of a Swiss ski chalet.

Tsingtao 1903

📍 175 LG F, The MixC,
6 Shandong Lu
☎ 5557-5700

Tsingtao 1903 is a brand-new chain that has a bar with the freshest beer in Qingdao. Renowned for their 'fishbowls' of beer, this fresh and modern bar, combined with the mini bakery selling giant pretzels and bread, has a slight café, come bar feel to it. The outside seating area is a great place for socialising on those summer evenings.

Angelina's

📍 136 Aomen Lu
☎ 6872-7999

The ground floor of Angelina's is a spacious area with a bar and comfy seats, which is great for a more chilled vibe. If you fancy more of a boogie, you can head downstairs to the dance floor. There is a great variety in music in Angelina's and, every Wednesday 8pm-1am, ladies can enjoy a free flow of selected cocktails.

Essence Trend Coffee

📍 Tianbao Guoji, 61 Haier Lu
☎ 185 6250-6682

This modernised space at Essence Trend has been expanded. With its excellent coffee and a great selection of bread, pastries and cakes, it makes the perfect place to grab a coffee in the morning or to study/work/relax in the afternoons, sitting on the outdoor decking area on a sunny day. The small bar in the back creates an area where you can also enjoy a drink in the evening.

BALANCING MY YIN (TAISHAN) & YANG (QUFU)

by Tim Foulds

Combine culture, nature and history on a trip to Qufu and Tai'an.

With a free weekend on our hands, some friends and I decided to explore the sights of Qufu and Tai'an. After the enjoyment of gliding through the beautiful scenery of Shandong Province, on arriving into Qufu, we immediately took a bus to San Kong. I'm sure the rest of the town has a lot to offer, but limited for time, we prioritized discovering the very reason why Qufu is such a hub for tourists: Confucius.

Even with little knowledge of Chinese history and culture, it's difficult not to have heard about this Chinese legend. A world-renowned thinker and social philosopher whose thoughts have been developed into a system of philosophy known as Confucianism, people flock from all parts of the globe to pay tribute to him. His work has significantly influenced the foundation of culture and education in China, as well as globally.

Qufu is Confucius' (551 BC - 479 BC) birthplace, and home to the Confucius Temple, Mansion and Family Graveyard. Collectively referred to as San Kong, this complex has been listed as a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 2004, which certainly warrants a visit. Access to the three sites is ticketed at 140RMB per person, but concessions are also available.

We spent the afternoon wandering around the beautiful sacred buildings, scenic gardens and statues. Despite enjoying taking in the sights, we didn't really feel as if we understood the significance of our surroundings due to the lack of English information. I would definitely recommend hiring a guide or purchasing a comprehensive guidebook. Moreover, I felt that the initial attraction and magnificence of this historic place was marred by the hordes of tourists and tour groups. Similarly, in and around the walled city, which lies around the complex, numerous souvenir stalls desperately market their goods and rickshaw drivers pester you to take a ride. In all, a visit in the quieter winter months might perhaps be more enjoyable.

The second part of our two-day trip led us to Tai'an, a short train or bus ride from Qufu, where we had the goal of climbing the most famous sacred mountain in China, Mount Tai.

Rising to more than 5,000 feet, Mount Tai plays an important cultural and historical role in China, listed as both a World Natural Heritage and World Cultural Heritage site by UNESCO in 1987. The object of an imperial cult for nearly 2,000 years, the mountain has been a source of inspiration for Chinese artists and intellectuals, symbolizing Chinese civilizations and beliefs.

Although there's the option of taking a bus or cable car up the mountain, we decided to do it the proper way and climb. Paying the 120RMB admission fee, we settled on taking the central path. Steps guide you all the way to the summit, but some parts are fairly steep, and can be a little challenging for the inexperienced climber. At a leisurely pace, the entire ascent took us around 3½ hours. The route is dotted with artistic masterpieces, cultural relics, frequent shops, food stalls as well as toilets, and the summit opens out onto a network of temples. Despite the magnificent views from the peak, similarly to San Kong, the swarms of people and mountain's clear commercialization slightly negates the joy of climbing a site of natural beauty. However, there are also other back routes which are less busy, that would provide a more serene climb.

If you're looking for a peaceful break away from the crowds, then perhaps this trip is not for you, but due to their cultural and historical significance, both Qufu and Mount Taishan without doubt merit a visit.

THE HAIER LEGEND IN THE NEW ERA

By Carson Xia

HCH Ventures is one of the most dynamic elements in legendary Haier's ever-evolving international expansion. In other words, it is using the world as its human resource department and R&D department, and is building itself as the global entrepreneur accelerator to provide one-stop services for global makers to reach out their dreams. Haier's Chairman of Board of Directors and CEO, Mr. Zhang Ruimin, once used the "tip of iceberg" metaphor to visualize his vision of Haier's transformation. The most prominent feature of this metaphor is unlimited resources below the tip to be explored, uncovered and optimally utilized.

As an accelerator, HCH Ventures stands out with Haier's rich industry resources. Partner and Overseas Director of HCH Ventures, James Wang, illustrated an example in his presentation by stating that "one recently accelerated case is how HCH Ventures helped an electrical vehicle company called Upincar, the staff of Haier's own logistics, and service team Ririshun. HCH Ventures also connected Haier's Hainergy business to Upincar to help the EV company expand its business to overseas markets by using Hainergy's international resources. As a result, HCH Ventures made each stakeholder benefit via cooperating with each other.

Mr. Wang also emphasized HCH's potential growth as a platform for micro and medium enterprises, or the ability to satisfy a niche demand, while they lack capital, engineering sampling, or the strength to infiltrate the market. To alleviate any problems, they plan to either directly inject money to those shortlisted projects, or bridge the gap between them and venture capitals that are in close collaboration. Some of these enterprises are already at the final go, but need a push—in such cases, we work as the accelerator by very close and deep communications with them to identify their needs in order to allocate the resources needed, and to assist them to launch their products or services to the market.

Haier is not China's only organization that has all these resources but it's definitely the first to create such a category for business. If we trace its footsteps to 35 years, we will not be surprised to see that Haier has always been the first in many aspects of the industry, leading the market and often creating new market demands and customer base. Three decades years ago, Mr. Zhang ordered employees to sledgehammer 76 defected refrigerators to arouse the awareness of quality. Today he is using the Rendanheyi Model to smash the hierarchical structure and eliminate bureaucracy of the organization. Every employee of Haier is grateful for his Rendanheyi Model, which makes everyone their own CEO and pursue their own dreams. HCH Ventures sincerely welcomes anyone who is interested in this new management model and entrepreneurial spirit to come participate into our summit. James concluded his presentation with a broad and bright smile on his face: "Satya Nadella, CEO of Microsoft once said, 'If you want to be cool, join some other company. If you want to make others cool, join Microsoft.' I would say, if you want to be cool, join Haier. If you want to make others cooler, join Haier HCH Ventures!"

HUANGDAO 黄岛

Huangdao boasts the best beaches in Qingdao Municipality and has become one of the most economically active in Qingdao. With the city's infrastructure and constructions of several shopping malls, Huangdao is attracting more and more inhabitants. The district has a direct link to Qingdao's old town - the Jiaozhouwan tunnel and a cross-sea bridge which has cut travel time to around 20 minutes. The top tourist attractions are without doubt Golden and Silver beaches, each with longer, sandier and less-spoilt stretches than any of those in Qingdao's downtown. In recent years, Huangdao also has grown into a foreign-investment hot spot, with many foreign companies opening here including the Sino-German Industrial Park/The Sino-Britain Industrial Park is under construction) and Wanda Oriental Movie Metropolis. With the development of recreation, F&B, education, medical, industry and tourism, Huangdao is becoming more and more international.

间中取静的黄岛拥有岛城最好的沙滩。近年来也是忙碌、繁华、新兴的商业城市中一处不可多得的好地方。随着近年城市基础设施的建设和大型购物中心的成立，这里如今已经成为一个经济活跃区。黄岛地区拥有一座连接青岛市中心的海陆隧道，以及一座跨海大桥，将旅途时间缩短了大约 20 多分钟。当地最具吸引力的无疑是金沙湾景区和银沙滩景区，这里沙滩好，天然未经破坏，绵长延展，是青岛市中心任何一个沙滩景区都无法比拟的。另外，近年来，黄岛秉承着招商引资的理念，吸引了很多外资企业前来投资建设，并建成了中德产业园(中德产业园也在开发建设中)万达影城等，为黄岛带来了更多的发展活力。餐饮、购物、教育、医疗、工业、旅游全面发展，黄岛正变得越来越完善，越来越国际化。

LOVE APPEAL CEREMONY

On September 8, 2018, Qingdao United Family Hospital and Laoshan TV held a joint Love Appeal ceremony. This aim of the ceremony was to highlight an ongoing important issue in Li County in Gansu Province. Gansu Li County Medical Assistance is calling for more caring people and socially responsible enterprises to provide extra much-needed medical assistance to the local left-behind children of Li County.

The left-behind children in Li County are in serious condition, far surpassing other areas

Gansu Li County Medical Assistance is a public welfare initiative, which is ongoing between counterparts in the East of China and the West of China to assist the poverty alleviation units based in Laoshan District in Qingdao. Li County is one of the most impoverished counties in Gansu and even all of China. It covers an area of 43 million square kilometers and has a population of more than 540,000. Li County is mountainous with scarce arable land and a severe lack of water resources. Overall poverty, income poverty, and ecological poverty are all apparent to anyone who cares to look. Due to a weak industrial base, many people in Li County have been forced to work in other places for years, so the problem of left-behind children has become a wider social issue that attracts a lot of much-needed attention.

From August 8 - 12, the Qingdao United Family Hospital Medical Team visited Li County on a field trip. Pediatrician Dr. Fu Ping was part of this medical team that went on the field trip and noted that she visited several local impoverished villages and performed physical examinations on more than 120 children. At least 81 percent had dental caries and 20 percent had moderate to severe malnutrition. In Qingdao, moderate to severe malnutrition counts for only a few out of every one thousand children. Some children are already 14 years old but have never had a physical examination, and some children don't even know what a stethoscope is. Dr. Fu said, "I've worked for more than 30 years, treating thousands of children, but when I arrived here I realized that the strength of a single individual is good but not enough. Therefore, we call on our peers to make a small but much-needed contribution to these children in poor mountainous areas and together we can care for their health!"

The first medical supplies have been delivered, but social support is still needed

During the visit in August, the Qingdao United Family Hospital Medical Team brought commonly used drugs and other medical supplies. These supplies were prepared in advance and given to every family in the hope of helping to improve their health. But the strength of a single individual, one team, and one enterprise is limited and a single visit cannot solve all the problems. The trip in August was just the first phase of Gansu Li County Medical Assistance. In October, the Qingdao United Family Hospital Medical Team plans to visit Li County again to provide more medical supplies and assistance to the local children.

"This aim of this activity is to create more awareness of the situation in Li County in Gansu province and to call on more caring people and socially responsible enterprises to join our team, to improve the children's health, and enable them to live a healthy and happy life," said Wang Ao, the General Manager of Qingdao United Family Hospital.

Actively explore "trickle down" targeted poverty alleviation and undertake Corporate Social Responsibility

Gansu Li County Medical Assistance is a public welfare initiative, which Qingdao United Family Hospital assists in targeted poverty alleviation. This makes full use of the hospital's medical advantages, actively mobilizes medical talents and medical resources and starting with the health of left-behind children in Western China, carries out a "trickle down" targeted poverty alleviation project, providing significant and much-needed health support for the local children.

Parenting Styles: American Culture VS Chinese Culture

Hi, my name is David. My family and I moved to Qingdao from the US, two months ago. My wife, Crysta, is an English teacher and I have the pleasure of staying home with our two wonderful children: Emelia (almost 3 years old) and Pace (17 months old). Prior to our move, we prepared ourselves for some decent culture shock moments. And as expected, we truly experienced some! I must say though, they have not been from anticipated sources.

I did a ton of research before coming here, so I was prepared for the things that would be shocking: squat toilets, food differences, language barrier, etc. But I don't think any of the reading I did prepared me for the thing that would pose the biggest cultural shock to us: parenting. I, in no way consider myself a parenting expert. After all, our oldest is about 3 so we've only been doing this for that long. However, if there was one thing we didn't anticipate being shocked by, it was that! Parenting is parenting, it doesn't matter whether you're doing it in the USA or in China or anywhere else, right? Wrong!

Before I go much further, let me say this: the Chinese people have been absolutely wonderful to us! They have been so accommodating, helpful, and genuinely sweet. Perhaps that's because we have children and they are enamored by them but either way, in our short two months, we have found the Chinese people to be wonderful!

With that being said, we have also encountered some very interesting differences in parenting here in China as opposed to the US. So here are my two biggest parenting take-aways from our first two months in China.

Anytime we go anywhere, it takes us double the amount of time it should to accomplish what we need to do. We can't go more than 20 feet without someone wanting to stop us to look at the kids or take pictures of them. It isn't uncommon for us to go on a market trip or to the beach and to have people INCHES away from our kids' faces with cameras in hand. Some people are wonderful and ask first, snap a picture, and move on. Others will stand there for what seems like an eternity taking picture after picture. Trying to get the perfect one. Trying to get their kids with our kids. Trying to get our kids to focus. At times it can be grueling.

In addition, at any given moment, our children can be picked up and whisked into a stranger's arms. And it happens before we can even blink! The only thing that has saved our son from this more is the fact that he's generally buckled into our stroller. But no doubt, there have been occasions where our stroller has almost done a back flip because someone was grabbing for him, not realizing he was buckled in. I won't lie, this is scary sometimes! Because this wouldn't happen in America. But, then I remember, we're in China.

My wife and I believe that children learn and develop through experiencing things through exploration of their world and we believe they can do more of this when we give them space! At times, they learn wonderful things. Other times, they learn some pain through these experiences. Now, let me clarify that we are not hands-off parents in any way! We are very much involved with our children. However, we give them the space they need to experience. We do this because we feel that if we were always on top of them, they wouldn't learn nearly as much, or they would begin to lean on us more for their learning and experiences than themselves.

Chinese parents are the opposite. They are never very far from their children. They don't give space. And that's great! They are a civilization that has survived for thousands of years so perhaps they are on to something. But what I have found most amusing is that they expect us to do the same and when we don't...the looks could kill!

Whether it's a mosquito landing on the kids, or them falling asleep in the stroller with their head slightly tilted, or them having a little dirt on them, or getting a little wet in the rain; if the kids aren't perfectly kept, or something happens that could be foreseen as dangerous, the Chinese parents will let you know about it! And whether you speak Chinese or not, you will know what they are communicating.

It has been a wonderful two months here in China and we are so happy that we made this move. I believe all the things I've mentioned are done with great innocence and sincerity, but that doesn't upend the fact that it is culturally shocking. In the US, if someone picked up your child randomly, you'd have the police on the phone in a second. If 10 people in an hour's time span took pictures of your children, you'd be worried about their safety. If a group of mothers scolded you because your child had some dirt on their leg or a large mosquito bite, you'd give them a piece of your mind and ask how they had messed up as a parent that day.

However, here in China, I'm learning this is the norm. They just want to have a picture of someone that looks different than they do. They want to be able to say they held an American baby. For the mothers and grandmothers, it's their life's work to take care of their children and they do it the best way they know how. They just want to remember for their life the joy that they felt when they randomly saw these American children in their local supermarket or at the beach.

In my opinion, that doesn't dismiss the need for us to set boundaries. But it does force us to evaluate why we feel the way we feel in certain circumstances and makes us confront any predisposed ideas or thoughts that we have inside ourselves. It makes us wonder, "Why is this so shocking to me?"

Let's Chat with the Essers!

Moving to a new country can be an incredibly daunting experience for expat families with young children. We interviewed the lovely Esser Family to learn about their transition to Qingdao.

Where are you from originally?

I (Catherine) am from Cape Town, South Africa and my husband, Justin, is from Texas, USA. We met in Busan, South Korea, in 2010. Eli our son, who's now 4, was born right here in Qingdao.

How long ago did you move to Qingdao?

We first moved to China in 2011, and often came to Qingdao on "getaway weekends." In 2013, we moved to Qingdao and have lived here ever since.

What were your first impressions of Qingdao, were there any big culture shocks?

There wasn't any culture shock for us at all when we moved to Qingdao. Before Qingdao, we lived in Dongying (also in the Shandong Province), and that was where most of the China culture shock took place. Since we had lived in South Korea for a couple of years before moving to China, we feel like we had less culture shock than most would have.

What is your first memory of Qingdao?

We came to Qingdao for my birthday, in 2012. It was St.Patrick's Day weekend and we met a ton of awesome people. Since there weren't many foreigners in Dongying at the time, it was really amazing to be able to connect with others.

What have you found most difficult about moving to Qingdao?

The thing that is most difficult for us is missing our family and friends. We no longer need particular foods from home, and are happy having them when we visit our home countries. For us, it is mainly the communities that we left behind, and even friends that we have made close connections with here, that have since left, that make it difficult for us. Another difficult aspect about living abroad is the ever-changing social groups.

Have you found it easy to settle in and make friends?

Since we have been in Qingdao for so long, we know a lot of people. Through work, social events, photography, and church, we are well-connected here.

Do you think your children enjoy living here, what do they think of the move?

Our son has only ever lived here, so Qingdao is his home. He really loves going to our home countries though. I think he misses the swimming pools, big back yards and our family dogs.

What is your favorite thing about Qingdao?

The views: Mountains that meet the ocean. Growing up in Cape Town, this is something that I really love and appreciate!

Do you have any recommendations on family friendly places to go?

Take the cable car up Yangkou in Laoshan. Hike up FuShan in every season. Wander through the streets in the older parts of Qingdao. Check out all of the awesome cafes and cute stores along Daxue Lu. Go to Zhongshan Park for a stroll and a picnic.

Is there anything you miss from back home?

100% - Family and Friends.

Do you see yourself living here for a while, what is your plan for the future?

We will definitely be here until the summer of 2019 but, after that, we honestly don't know right now. Perhaps we will stay for a couple more years, or maybe we will move onto a new adventure. We are currently figuring that out!

Are We Actually Speaking the Same Language? Analyzing Sources of Disagreement

by Adina Deacu 邱天美
Environmental Psychologist

October is finally here. For some people, this means that it's time to go back to school, for others, it means that winter is approaching. For the remainder, it just means National Holiday. So how is it that the same concept, idea or object can get so many different meanings? How does that influence the outcome of conversations among different people? In this article, I am going to explore some of the less obvious sources of disagreement leading to miscommunication. I will do so by giving an environmental psychology (EP) view on the matter and will also share some ways to prevent miscommunication from occurring.

You might wonder why I decided to write about this topic. I thought a lot about what I should write and inspiration came while reading Mike Hulme's book: Why we disagree about climate change. Understanding controversy, inaction and opportunity. He writes: "We disagree about climate change because we view our responsibilities to future generations differently, because we value humans and Nature in different ways, and because we have different attitudes to climate risks." (I strongly recommend reading the book, btw!)

I read this book just after coming back from a workshop in Poland, where I worked with professionals from different fields on understanding what could be the future of a local housing estate built in the 60's for the needs of that time, but that seems obsolete according to 21st century needs. The group discussions in the workshop, as well as Hulme's ideas, confirmed what I had already noticed throughout my multidisciplinary career: we tend to disagree, not only about climate change, but also about many other issues, either because we understand the same concepts differently or because we use different terminology for the same concepts depending our field of expertise. As a result, we think that we know better than others and "fight" for our opinions, even if in essence we might be using the same language, but talking about completely different things, based on individual understanding.

So why does this happen? What is EP's take on it?

Of course, in order to answer this question, I need to give you a bit of background on myself. I studied BA+MA in Urban Planning and Management and graduated in 2010, but in my second year of university, I had already started professing as a full-time urban planner/architect. However, in 2008, in order to be able to continue funding my university studies, the financial crisis pushed me in a completely new direction (sales, marketing and customer service). In 2012, in an attempt to return to the urban planning profession, I moved to Shanghai to pursue an internship in urban design, but soon realized that my place is a different one. Because I wanted to understand more how people's behaviors are influenced by the physical space, I moved to the UK to pursue an MSc Environmental Psychology at Surrey University. While in the UK, I was awarded a scholarship at the Qingdao University to study Chinese, so this is how I ended up in Qingdao. After that, one thing led to another and I found myself running an environmental psychology start-up in China. Life is full of unpredictable stuff and dealing with change can be very frustrating, but this will be the topic for a future article. The main idea I want to express here is that having been exposed to so many different professional environments, I had the opportunity to observe how each of them can shape/change the way in which each of us thinks and acts. I just came to make more sense of the theories behind the processes after studying EP.

Take my recent experience in Poland, for example. As a group, we had understood from the very start that the realization of the housing estate met numerous obstacles. Throughout the building process, numerous changes were implemented in the project, not always in accordance with the architect's ideas, which led to numerous conflicts with the future residents of the estate who felt that their expectations about the desired living conditions were not met.

While trying to figure out the future of the housing estate, as a group, we would always be on the verge of frustration having long discussions in circles leading nowhere and having to agree on things that we had already agreed upon previously (at least in my understanding). You may imagine how that went in a group with one psychologist, a historian, 2 PhDs, 2 architects and 1 student in global innovation studies with nationalities covering countries from Europe all the way to Asia.

Only towards the end of the workshop did we start realizing that even though we were using the same terminology, the meanings we attributed to them were somewhat different depending on the industries we were all coming from, which had caused our discussions in circles.

So what part of this is EP?

Well, as I mentioned in previous articles as well, environmental psychology studies the interactions between spaces and people, and how they mutually influence each other. The places we grow up in (and by that I mean everything: actual physical space, cultural context etc.) and the education that we receive all shape the views that we have on the world. These will later on be shaped by our working environments and our willingness to remain curious and open to new ideas. For example, some people actually feel that after graduating university, all their learning endeavors are finished and refuse to accept any new ideas. As a result, we end up having different understandings and perceptions about the same concepts, making way for disagreements.

In the case of the project in Poland, the conflict between the residents of the housing estate and the architect was also a result of miscommunication between different understandings. For the architect, the estate meant an architectural breakthrough considering the conditions he had to work under in the 60s, while for the residents it just meant awful living conditions, as they had no awareness about local planning regulations, nor the limitations which the architect had to work under. For our group work, our different understandings and visions on the issues discussed lead us to misinterpret other group members' words and discuss in circles, making the working process very frustrating.

How can these less visible communication issues be prevented?

In order to prevent such issues from occurring, we need to accept that there is no absolute truth. We should become aware of different understandings and accommodate for that by taking time to establish common working concepts, so that future frustrations are avoided. Had our group done that in the first place, our work would have been a lot more effective. There is also a great need for more cross-cultural, multi-disciplinary dialogue to facilitate inclusiveness and acceptance of others' ideas. If in doubt about where to find such dialogues in Qingdao, you can attend the offline events that Tianmei's World is organizing (add WeChat ID: tmshijie for more details).

For article length considerations, I will finish by inviting you to try a small experiment. Ask as many people around you as possible the following question: "What makes you happy?" and see what answers you get. If you want to make more sense of the answers and know more about EP, feel free to send an email to tianmeisworld@outlook.com.

Mike Hulme "Why we disagree about climate change. Understanding controversy, inaction and opportunity"

Wang Xinyu

- A Shining Light in The World of Robotics

Former trainee at i Innovation Maker Space, Wang Xinyu, embarks on an exciting, new academic journey in the US.

Wang Xinyu, in the centre of the picture, has been in the public eye for her recent academic successes in gaining entry to Carnegie Mellon University, United States. A former trainee at i Innovation Maker Space, her past teachers explain her how her achievements come as no surprise.

It's a well known fact that education should serve to spark interest and generate intrigue, rather than just pass on knowledge. Through hard work and dedication, Wang joined the FRC Team 5453 in 2015, and it was here where she first discovered her interest and developed a passion for robotics. FRC gave her the chance to improve her skills and fulfill her dream of becoming a student of the famous American university.

It's important to note that success is not instant. Wang put in many hours of work and overcame many obstacles to get to where she is now. She had an interest which quickly developed into a dream. Through perseverance, she was able to bring this dream to life.

Due to the fact that science and engineering are often male-dominated areas of study, many girls are put off pursuing degrees or careers in these fields. In this way, Wang stands out from the rest and is one of few women studying robotics.

Above all she enjoys programming, and also gets involved in many competitions. During her holidays, Wang returned to i Innovation Maker Space to carry out a drone project.

Geniuses are few and far between, but everyone has the chance to be successful. Wang Xinyu attends Carnegie Mellon University and now the future is hers!

Good luck to her!
